White Rock is next to Los Alamos, which is where the atom bomb was developed, and all the restaurants were destroyed in some atomic accident and only Pizza Hut was left which was probably some radioactive culinary mutation. We just ate there. AAARRRRRGHHHHH. Really.

But White Rock is also next to Bandelier National Monument, a really neat park. Tomorrow we will go to the main park. Today we went to the Tsankawi part for a warm-up hike. There were supposed to be ruins but we never found them. Just the usual picturesqueness (picturesequepicity?) of New Mexico.

There was cool stuff along the way. I found a butt-shaped depression in the rocks so I sat in it.

Atomic flowers.

More tomorrow.
