Whoa baby! The new S660!

You know you want one..

Think we're on the road again? Right you are, astute readers. Today we took US 24 west, catching pieces of Topeka, St. Marys, Manhattan (The Little Apple) and Clay Center before we broke on through to continuous agriculture. The soybeans are ripening, big machines are doing farm things in the fields, and a cool front pushed some rain through yesterday. Kansas is happy.

We found a relaxing place to eat in Glen Elder State Park. Yep, that's actually a lake back there.

In the park, as well as along most of our route, there was a profusion of sunflowers.

Yes we know it's the sunflower state, thank you so much.

When we went through St Marys we saw 7 turkeys cross the road. Why did they do that?

Tomorrow we'll be in Colorado and, although the trip may not get more interesting, the pictures will be better and the philosophical challenges less stressful.
