Greetings from Guymon, Oklahoma. Today we traversed Kansas, fascinated by the gas mileage readout and trying to figure out what was rattling in the back. We also spotted wildlife. Kansas wildlife. We saw 31 ducks, 23 vultures and a dead coyote. Near Florence, Kansas, we saw ten of the strangest looking deer. They looked so strange because they were elk. Whaaaattt???? Well, turns out there was a captive herd in the 80's that was partially released to the wild. Remarkably, they remained in Kansas and their descendants still wander the state, bugling forlornly and looking for mountains.

But missed that picture. Here's a train.
