When you are tooling along US-60 in the high desert of New Mexico, crossing the endless flat of the Plains of San Agustin, you will pass the Very Large Array of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory. It comprises 27 massive radio antennae that are coordinated to act as a single huge receiver of extraterrestrial radiation. Horse manure. We know Star Fleet Control Base when we see it.

Scottie's antenna repair shop.

For the complete government cover-up go to public.nrao.edu.

To get ourselves reoriented to planet earth, we continued up US-60 to Pie Town. Pie-O-Neer, opening for the season every year on 3.14, is owned and operated by The Pie Lady of Pie Town, Kathy Knapp. She gave us our pie fix.

I ordered chocolate cream and Sheila had her usual New Mexico Apple with Green Chile and Pine Nuts, a la mode.

Pictures, chronological:

Tonight: Chile Cheeseburgers at the Owl Café.

Life is good.
