We slipped out of the crappy B&B at dawn and scrounged the last room in Moab at the Fairfield. Whew!

UT-128 into town, delightful as always.

Went on a Jeep hike through Buckhorn Wash and saw stuff.

Red rocks.

And we found a dinosaur track.
So I'm standing next to it on this ledge about 40' above the roadway.
I holler "Do you want to come up or should I just take a picture?"
She says "OK" and takes my picture.

Here it is. Yes, it's the dino track. No, it's not an ancient Indian gesture of contempt.

We saw an extraterrestrial.

WOW

Now this one was truly good – a 130 ft. panel of 1000-2000 year old pictographs and petroglyphs.

From Amazon Prime.

And for the grand finale, The Wedge Overlook of "Little Grand Canyon".

This is not the first pretender to "Little Grand Canyon" we have seen, but it's the best.

For a curtain call we had lunch.

Our table was perfectly framed by the trees and I just needed a little more space around them for an awesome photo. Back a step. Back a step. Whoa! Head over heels. Well, head and heels and all of me over a big rock. In this re-creation, it's the split second before Sheila says "OMG are you OK?" And I say "@#$&*(".

That's all folks.
