Don Eckert used to tell us "You guys always find the weirdest things!"

Today started with a dancing flagman on US-191.

We drove on.

...when out of nowhere, in a frenzy of barking, a dog charged four steers.

A head butt backed Fido off. We left him still circling and barking. And drove on.

On top of Harts Draw were these strange labeled standpipes with small, perpendicular pipes attached.

Through each little pipe you got this teeny-weeny view of the named feature.

We took some photos at 25X zoom. And drove on.

When we got to Canyonlands the trip normalized. We saw:

Newspaper Rock

Dutch Shoe Rock

The Needles

A shoe in a tree.

You're right, that's not normal. And how could you lose one hiking shoe? But it was a good finish to a weird day. So we drove on.

Thinking of you, Don.
